Learning Outcomes

- Update on the LPN pilot programme and the future role in the new NHS structures
- Update on the national medication safety agenda and consider what future action is required
- Consider what evidence exists for effective transfer of medicines-related information across boundaries of care – why it’s important, what works and what does not
- Understand how working with complex local systems of medicines management in primary care can produce effective improvements
- Critically review the ways in which intravenous therapy is transferred to primary care settings

Target Audience

- Senior NHS pharmacists providing, managing or supporting a patient service in any pharmacy setting
- PCT pharmacists who commission and monitor medicines management services
